

AG LABOR MANAGEMENT EDUCATION PROGRAM

The University of California Cooperative Extension, San Diego County's Farm Labor Education Program is a two-tiered program offering educational seminars and training workshops to help agricultural employers, human resource managers and labor supervisors to better understand and mitigate labor related risks impacting agricultural businesses. Our Ag Supervisor training workshops are offered in Spanish by highly experienced bilingual instructors to help supervisors learn about the critical role and importance of their jobs and how to better manage and communicate with employers and workers. Supervisors will learn to implement required policies and procedures to foster employee retention and more effectively prevent and manage work injuries, harassment claims, union interventions, and wage and hour issues.
